

2004 BMW CCA Club Racing School At Texas World Speedway November 13-14, 2004

Are you any of these?

An accomplished driver who:

- A. Would like to find out what it feels like to pass and be passed in turns?
- B. Would like to experience the excitement of race starts?
- C. Would like to find out what driving lines are out there other than the Driver's Ed line?

OR

An accomplished driver who is contemplating going racing sometime in the future?

OR

An accomplished driver who has decided to join the racer's fraternity and wants to do it the best way possible? And want to do it in your current Drivers Ed car?

If you answered yes to any of the above then we have just the opportunity for you. This highly structured school will be conducted in a non-contact environment with Scott Hughes as the lead instructor and is limited to 30 participants. The entry fee of $375 includes a total of eight classroom instruction sessions and eight on track sessions preceded by an information meeting the night before. This event is intended to assist experienced drivers get a taste of what racing is all about. It is open to drivers who have previous track experience and have driven solo in chapter schools or who are instructors. Your vehicle need not be a BMW, nor have a roll cage, only the normal Driving School Safety Equipment is required for both your car and yourself. If you do well and are accepted into the "graduation race" at the end of the school then you are required to have full race safety equipment for both yourself and your car in order to participate.
